NYE'S NEW COLUMBUS

SHORT HISTORY OF THE GREAT DIS-COVERER BY A FAITHFUL PEN.

Some Account of the Way He Started Out in Life and Began to Have His Picture Taken, Besides Thinking About Discovering America.

[Copyright, 1892, by Edgar W. Nye.]

The great demand for more and more Columbus literature has brought out many new facts regarding the great discoverer, and yet many inquiries are received at this office every day regarding the personal history of Columbus, his education, etc., notwithstanding the fact that every newspaper and magazine for the past six months has ransacked the Old and New Worlds for data regarding him.

It may not be out of place, therefore, to summarize regarding the great navigator for the benefit of those who have no time to read voluminous biographies, but who are in search of something terse, yet trustworthy.

Columbus was the eldest son of Dominico Colombo and Suzanna Fontanarossa, and he was born, it is thought, in COLUMBUS SITS FOR HIS PORTRAIT. 1435, at Genoa. He died May 20, 1506, at Valladolid, from collapse and coma brought on by having tried to resemble his different portraits.

The most reliable biographer of the great admiral who so soon noted the value of America as an opening for the soiled and oppressed of the Old World, where they could come and bring their cholera with them, was Fernando Colombo, the son.

Christopher Columbus was educated at the normal school in Paria, where he stood well in mathematics, and especially in trigonometry, or the science of Antonio de Terzago was his tutor, it is said. De Terzago was the originator of the mathematical discovery that in addition a great saving of time and also greater accuracy may be secured by setting down the right hand figures and carrying the tens to the next column.

At the age of fifteen Columbus became a sailor and began sitting for his picture.

There were three sons in the Columbus family and one daughter, who married a butcher. Her brother, it is said, on his first voyage brought with him from America a dozen softshell crabs and a diamond back terrapin for his sister's husband, but no one would purchase them, and they perished on his hands. This brother-in-law afterward wrote a piece for the paper stating that reciprocity with America was not what it had been cracked up to be.

Another biographer says that Columbus went to sea at the age of fourteen, but this may be because of the conflict regarding the year of his birth.

Columbus was soon placed in command of a cruiser and visited the archipelago. He also went to Iceland, hoping to find an open polar sea. This is not generally known, but I get it pretty straight and have no reason to doubt it. He visited what was then called Friesland, or Ultima Thule, from the Latin tongue, and signifying the jumping off place. It was what is now called Iceland, and Columbus was one of the earliest navigators to penetrate to the region of the pole and leave a pantaloons button on the axle of the world. On his return he said that the only thing in favor of that country as a home was that there were neither mosquitoes nor malaria there. He staked off a town, but the claim was jumped by a polar bear and reverted to the original owners.

Las Casas describes Columbus as having a long face, ruddy in places; an aquiline nose, clear gray eyes, a quick, commanding glance and light bair, which had begun to grow gray at thirty.

He fell in love with and married Filipa Monis de Palestrello, who was in the convent where he used to pray of a morning. Her father was very poor, being governor of Porto Santo and trying to live on his salary. This had never been tried before and has not been attempted since. He died leaving little except a chart of the world, together with what was supposed then to be an accurate drawing of the underpinning upon which it rested.

Not long after this Columbus confided in Paolo Tascarelli his belief that it would now be a good time to discover America.

Tascarelli was a physician and cosmographer of that place and a man rather in advance of his time, as was Columbus. Tascarelli lived on his practice as a physician and relied very little on what he could make as a cosmographer. He was the first physician to discover that the fly of Spain, if collected in large quantities and placed on the human skin, would make a blister. Let us not, then, in our enthusiasm over Columbus forget the man who discovered the blister and perfected it. Columbus and Tascarelli were great friends, and one day the former said to Tascarelli: "Doc, I feel almost certain that I, too, am going to discover something. You now feel of course elated over the discovery of the blister, but the day will out him up to it.

come when 1, too, shall be looked up to, and people will come for miles to cat their luncheons over my grave."

Little did he know then that his ashes would be shipped back and forth between Spain and the West Indies every time there was a revolution in Cuba for half-a century.

It was now settled that Columbus should undertake the discovery of America, but he needed capital. He must co-operate with some one who had means. He first approached the senate of Genoa. His application was referred to the committee on Indian affairs. The paper read as follows:

To the Honorable Senate of Genoa: GENTLIMEN-It has occurred to me that if we are going to discover America it is high time we should go about it. If we delay, England will do it and get ber name in the papers.

At the present time I am out of employment, and could go if I had the means. I have a chart left me by my father-in-law which I am sure will aid me in discovering America and mak-ing of it a popular resort for sporadic choicra and any overproduction of leprosy or crime which may be seeking an outlet in a new country.

If you should not see fit to aid me in opening up a new world, which will hold its exposition in Chicago, I hope, I shall have to apply to John II, who has already partially promised to fit me out and also to keep my family in groceries during my absence.

Trusting that you will take hold of this matter, authorizing me not only to discover America, but anything else I can lay my hands on, I remain, your obedient servant. CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

Care Lotes club, Genoa. The senate fooled along from day to day with this matter, tabling it, referring it, postponing it, reporting adversely and recommitting it to other committees till Columbus got weary and went to John II, who treated him the same way, only worse, inviting friends in on Columbus days to hear this great original "rainbow chaser" go on about what he could do if he could only get money enough to discover America.

Let us pass over this sad era in the life of Columbus. It is too pathetic to discuss. He was on his oars, as Tascarelli said at the time, and earning nothing. He was well fitted for the position to which he aspired, but there was so little demand then for discoverers that he was well nigh discouraged. This should teach us that we must fit ourselves for mething for which there is a demand.

It is true that the glory of discovering a world is something, but it comes too, it at ten cents a case, who buy it or not, To have a large variety of attention four hundred years afterward is a good thing-better than to be forgotten-but it does not surround the children with all wool underwear at the time.

Indiguant at Portugal, and left a widower at an early age with one son and no money whatever, this sorrowful advance agent of freedom and prosperitythis sad eyed prophet of happy and well protected industry—dropped down hope-lessly in the Franciscan Convent of St. Mary's of Rabida, in Andalusia, worn and weary, sorrowful and despondent.

The prior, who was leading a very busy life absolving Ferdinand and Isabella twice a week, took Columbus to these monarchs and also put him up at the club for two weeks.

Columbus spoke about how well the queen's dress was draped, and admired it so much that he was asked to come and drive with them on Friday and meet a well known English author, who was in town over night with a view to writing a book on it. The great navigator made a good impression on both sovereigns, and ere long they had agreed to fit out three catboats Ferdinand had no means at hand, however, except an English breechloading gun, a red setter and a pair of high rubber boots. Isabella also reported the treasury to be insolvent, but she was a woman of great resources at such times, and although, as a matter of fact, the very throne she sat on was being paid for in weekly installments, she gave music lessons, gave readings from her own works and ran errands till she had the money.

Columbus took it with tears and went at once to have his picture taken. When not discovering America this was his sole recreation. Every time he shaved or cut his hair he had a cabinet picture taken of himself in a new at-

Getting a steamer chair near the place where his picture was taken, he went aboard the boat at once, and was soon a mere speck on the horizon.

On the 12th of October, 1492, after a long wet tramp over an unknown sea, a

THE LANDING OF COLUMBUS.

Columbus was eating a watermelon, and calling him to one side and drawing his ear toward him said in a low voice, 'Land, ho!"

"Honest?" exclaimed Columbus. "Si, senor!" said the man, "if you wish to discover America you will never have a better time."

So Columbus went up on deck and attended to it. Columbus was far in advance of the times in which he lived, but there were many times when he could not get a sack of flour. He was a great genius, but had very little fun.

When he wanted to make a hit everybody called him a crank, and after he and made it all his neighbors said they

Jealousy put him in jail and subsequently fought over his bones, and it is only 400 years after his discovery that special rates are to be made over the ailroads on account of it.

Columbus found also the West Indian slave trade, but was sorry for it afterward. He was also tried on his return for having discovered Fire island, but was successful in proving an alibi and was acquitted.

Thanksgiving Proclamation. To the People of Arizona-Greeting:

To the People of Arizona—Greeling:
In accordance with the proclemation of the President of the United States and established custom, I, N. O. Murphy, Governor of Arizona, do hereby designate Thursday. November 2kth, as a day of Thanksgiving in this Territory, and its proper observance is requested. The clouds of political dissension, engendered by the contest just ended, will soon have been dissipated by the sunlight of patriotism and loyal submission to the expressed will of the people. It is, therefore, suggested that the vanquished in the lace coutest should forget their disappointment, and the victors temper their joy, in mutual thanksgiving because of the peace, hapthat that say the victors temper inter joy, in mu-tinal thanksgiving because of the peace, hap-piness and unexampled prosperity of the Ter-ritory and Nation.

In witness whereoi, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal to be affixed. Done at Phonix, the capital, this 11th day of November, A. D., 1892.
